In principle, purpose or acts, and feels the degradation which attaches to the accusation. The natural inclination of human kind is to admire liberal things and commend their practice in others.

Although in themselves no germ of the better elements exist, yet strange as it better elements exist, yet strange as it may appear, a majority of men indulge in personal prejudice against others. It's a positive fact that the average Englishman, especially those prominent in government circles, are the most overbearing vindictive and arrogant people in the world, and particularly, if people in the world, and particularly, if their autagonists are inferior in means and numbers, they are never tired of seeking revenge. As an illustration of such in a recent speech written for Queen Victoria she rejoices to say the law is carried out in such strict measure, but there is no allusion to the famine prevailing in Ireland almost under her own eye. Now, if she would use a little influence to have her government carried on with more humanernment carried on with more human-ity, instead of showing that she is omnipotent, and provoking the people to do what otherwise could be avoided, she would have some claim to the regard of her subjects. The people are supporting her in magnificent grandeur, supporting her in magnificent grandeur, and her army of relatives, yet she pets the rich and discards the poor as if they had no right to live. She helps to destroy the people's industries, as in the case of the great sale of Limerick lace, when she dressed her horses with it to have it go out of fashion. In those days girls were able to maintain their holdings, but she destroyed the means of doing so. The way the men would be compelled from starvation to enlist in the states, but in the free territories of the states and that has been done since 1861. The latest has been done since 1861. army is another instance of how she tried to humiliate Ireland. It was proposed at one time to fix up the Vice Regal lodge in Dublin, and have the Prince of Wales live in it a part of the money and a part at least of the money of its present adoptive American labor of the present and a part at least of the money of its present adoptive American labor of the present and a part at least of the money of its present adoptive American labor of its vear, and a part at least of the money going out of Ireland would be spent there. But that she would not agree to. She thought it would make the people too happy. For genuine patriotism, sterling virtue, wealth of family affection, and all the other qualities of the work work which was to make the sudacity to talk about Republican unfaithfulness to labor interests.

There is to be further prosecuting of ballot box stuffers in South Carolina in April. Bad times are ahead of us. It is looked upon as certain that there will be a good many failures in Canada before the year is out. There have been more goods brought into this country than there is demand for, and money that should have been used in legitimate commercial channels has been employcommericial channels has been employ ed in land speculations, the result being that a great dear of it is locked up in the northwest. Commercial crises come in cycles, and we may begin to look for one in the not distant future.

You can never discuss the relations which each party bears to labor without referring to the past. The whole issue between the two great parties was the labor question. In the interest of free white labor the Republicans declared that slaves should not be taken to Kansas or other territories to compete with the labor which was winning the bread for white children's mouths. The Dem-for white children's mouths. The Democratic party backed the unpaid labor of black slaves against the paid labor of white citizens, both native and naturalized, and maintained the slaveholders right to take his human chattels to new fields already occupied by free white labor. Which party was then faithful to the interests of labor? The Democratic party not only made-ats sole business the defense of slave labor, but it became so servile in this cause that it subordinated all other interests to the single one of cotton growing. It deprecated a successful life's work. one of cotton growing. It deprecated a successful life's work, protective tariff because it desired to God moves in a protective tariff because it desired to supply raw cotton to England and give her a monopoly of our market for the fabrics made from it. Next to a free school house the old bourbon Democracy hated a northern cotton factory. The industries of the north and its free emigrants to the western territories killed slavery in the interest of paid labor. The country dismissed the Democratic party from power because that party became a plantation overseer. The retention by the Democracy of to-day of the old dogma of "a tariff for revenue only" is a defiance of the power which dethroned King Cotton, for it is continuing the old war against home industries which was made in the interest of that staple of slave production. The party staple of slave production. The party which lives only on old hostilities can not complain if the causes which were Editor Banner:—

THE judiciary committee of the lower house of the Pennsylvania Legislature has favorably reported a bill providing that if the authorities of Philadelphia will furnish, without cost to the State, enitable accommodations for the executive business, and for the sessions of the Legislature, that city shall be made the capital of the State.

THE boom to secure the release of Ser geant Mason, who tried to shoot Guiteau. does not seem to work up as anticipated, and the prospects of his release are not any better now than they were several months ago. In the meantime "Bettie and the baby" are living quietly on their farm in Virginia. Mrs. Mason occasionally visits Washington. It is understood, however, that at the experation of his term of office President Arthur will grant a pardon to Sergeant Mason.

In a murder case in California, which was appealed to the Supreme Court, the only defence made was "insanity from the long continued use of intoxicants." The lower court charged the jury that "insanity produced by intoxication would not destroy responsibility when the party when sane and responsible made himself voluntarily intoxicated, and that drunkenness was no excuse for crime, but it was a circumstance for the consideration of the jury in determining the degree of crime." The Supreme Court held that the charge was correct, and affirmed th judgment.

THE recent decision of a United States District Judge in Missouri tends to make of the postmaster a person enjoying greater immunity from physical assault than does Pugilist Sullivan himself. A country postmaster in the above State was assaulted by a drunken man. Although there was no actual interference be rushed through or stampeded to death with the mail, the Judge before whom the assailant was arraigned imposed a fine of $100, under an old act of Congress, which declares that "any person who shall ing a vacant seat anywhere or an inch of knowingly and willfully obstruct or retard the passage of the United States wander disconsolately up and down the mail shall be liable," etc.

THE Indianapolis Journal says: "A special to the Journal from Elkhart gives the particulars of the recently reported 'faith cure' at that place. It seems that the 'procuring cause' was a devout person in Boston, who fixed upon 3 o'clock of a certain day when prayers was to be offered, and that it was 'precisely' 3 o'clock at Elkhart on the day named when the cure was effected. There is a difference in time between Boston and Elkhart of about sixty-five minutes, so it would seem that the 'faith cure' is limited, as it were, by human circumstances and conditions. We do not quite grasp the matter, but it would appear as if a cog were out of this miracle somewhere."

THE most extraordinary punishment which is, perhaps, on record is to be found in Morrison's "Account of Germany:" "Near Lindau I did see a malefactor hanging in iron chains on the gallows, with a mastive dogge hanging on each side by the heels, as, being nearly staryed, they might eat the flesh of the malefactor before himself died by the famine and at Frankforde I did see the like punishment of a Jew." The only thing which may serve to lesson our surprise at this shocking refinement in cruelty is the re-Section that it happened in a country so pre-eminent for the horrid nature of its punishments that no one can be prevailed upon to accept the office of executioner but he who, by being the son of a hangman, is obliged to be trained up, and take upon himself the necessary employment.

THE will of ex-Governor Morgan gives a fraction less than $800,000 of an estate of $6,000,000 to charitable and benevolent purposes, including gifts of $200,000 to Union Theological Seminary; $200,000 each to the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, to the Board of Home Missions, and to Williams College; of $80,000 each to the Supplementary Fund for Clergymen's Salaries, to the Manhatand Eye and Ear Infirmary and to the Presbyterian Hospital, with smaller bequests of $5,000 to $2,500. To his wife he gives his house and a million of money, and the income for life of a million. To forty other relatives he gives $407,500, and leaves balance of his estate in trust for his grandson and namesake. A host of friends are remembered, and household servants receive $8,000 each. The Tribune says the will of the late Governor sustains the reputation for generosity which he showed in life. Bequests are left for charitable and educational flow in a narrow channel but flows over a wide field of good work.

A SPECIAL telegram to an Indianapolis paper graphically describes the closing scenes of the recent congress. The dispatch is published Saturday and reads: The accumulated work of two years is crowding upon the last hours of a dying Congress. The pressure is tremerdous -150 members are going out of the House many of them to return no more, and they are struggling to get last-chance bills through. It is a scramble and a rush. The people of Washington are taking an intense interest in the proceedings of Congress, and they crowd the galleries by thousands. The press at night is greatest. Multitudes swarm to the Capitol, filling every nook and corner of the great building, taking possession of the galleries, the corridors, reception and committies rooms. The House end is the most attractive, and every inch of the space assigned to spectators is gobbled up before the hour arrives for business to begin. Members rush hither and thither with their ladies trying to find seats that have been overlooked They find the galleries full to overflowing, and they storm and fret and fume, anxious to anchor their charges, and doubly anxious to get back on the floor fearing that something important might in their absence. The diplomatic galleries are seized and filled in an instant, and when there is no such thing as findstanding room men, women and children corridors, take refuge in commtttee rooms or crowd into the gallery entrances. straining to catch a glimpse of the scene below. Senator Campbell's convict labor bill passed the Senate Thursday. It provides for a thorough system by which to put the contracts for prison labor in the most open competition, the object being to have the convicts bring the highest price in the market that competition can force. and the result must be to raise the prices paid for convicts so much as to make the prisons bring an income to the State, and also to overcome very largely the depressing influence upon free labor which the present system of low prices for convicts has caused.

He there upon offered a resolution that whereas the Indianapo'is Journal of February 25 contained articles oeffecting upon himself personally, therefore resolved that it was a malicious attack, etc. The resolution was ostensibly to test the sense of the House on the subject. His speech was a remarkable one. He called attention to the fact that he had always on the floor been considerate and courteous, and that he had never made a political speech or injected any political business into the House. He paid his respects to Overmeyer and Milligan and quoted from the Journal's files of 1860 to show that it favored secession. He denied the Journal's charga that he was ever editor of the Salem Times and quoted Morton's ante-negro Richmond speech. He also denied he was a member of the murderous committee of ten or was in sympathy with them. Interspersed through the speech were the most extraordinary phrases of denunciation. In closing he again asked the Journal and Gen. Williams what they were going to do about it? As soon as he finished his speech he withdrew his resolution, saying he had accomplished all he intended when he offered it, and the House adjourned before a protest could be filed by the Republicans. - [Indianapolis News.

> Bits of The Tariff and Revenue. Representative Carlisle, the most promiment candidate for speaker, next session, says the tariff bill is a hodge-podge, and that the Forty-eighth Congress will go over the work again.

A tobacco dealer gives it as his opinion that the rebate clause of the revenue bill on each $100 valuation for twelve years. will cost the government $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 on tobacco and cigars alone. The rebate is on whole packages, and dishonest dealers can systematically swindle the government out of large sums.

A great amount of additional labor is thrown upon the Secretary of the Treasury by the passage of the bill, as he must define the law in every particular. On one point alone which will be sprung the Secretary will have to make a $3,000,000 ruling, and others of equal importance may develop.

Pittsburg iron masters interested in the ariff have been unanimous in their declarations that under the law a reduction of wages of all classes of workmen will be necessary. If this is presisted in it will very probably result in a general strike. a large number of employes asserted that any attempt to reduce wages will be stubbornly resisted. Bradford manufacturers are disappointed over the new law; while Chicago operators say it is more injurions to iron interests than any legisla tion within half a century, and that the only means of keeping the mills open will be by a sweeping reduction in wages and putting them at such a point that laborers, in turn, must have cheaper board. Poles Bros.' mill at Pottstown, Pa., which was stopped some weeks ago, on account of uncertainty about the tariff, started Monday, but the men struck after one heat, on account of a notice that wages would be reduced.

San Antonio (Tex.) Special. A report has leaked out here regarding a great game of poker played in N. Fortune still combatted him, and at the close of the game he had lost three of the best engines he owned. They are now running on the winner's road in this State, their numbers being 22, 24 and 26, and are valued at $40,000.

A. J. Downing, who was one of the best corticulturists America has ever known, said; "If I were to preach a sermon on horticulture I should take for my text 'Stir the Soil.' Frequent and keep stirring will enable one to grow fine vegetables on comparatively poor and slightly manured soil, while without it one fails to gain the proper advantage, even from the richest and finest soil."

Guides for Ghosts.

The Chinese hill tribes believe that man has only three souls, and these are satisfactorily disposed of. One appropriately and conveniently remains in the grave, another takes up its position at the ancestral board, and the third roams about unrestrained in the spirit world, and not necessarily on earth. Many of the hill women are fond, as in India, of giving their dead child a dog, or (by dint of prayers or supplications) the departed soul of an old and experienced person as a guide, that the infant wanderer may not miss its way on the path to the spirit world. For this reason it was that the Mongolians sent slaves to accompany their dead Princes. The Chinese, however, have a more humane idea. They believe that since it is likely that the dead man will be unable to find his way safely to the world of spirits, and may as probably as not stray from the right path, the kings of the under world would furnish him with a little devil to act the part of a guide and servant to the newly disembodied spirit on its journey. The Poles used to have a notion of a similar kind, though they, like the Chinese, did not display it in such an unpleasant way for survivors. It was their custom to lay bear's claws in the grave, to serve the dead man with hooks, with the help of which he might climb the great glass mountain. According to the common notion among the Karens the dead renew as "plu pho" in the world of Plu, under the sovereignty of the great King Cootay or Theedo, the occupations which they had followed while as yet mortals on earth-a curious hint at the caste system of the Hindocs, which has no place with the Karens while they are alive.

IMPORTANT EVENTS.

DEATH OF A. H. STEPHENS.

Alexander H. Stephens died Sunday morning at his home in Georgia. Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, Govern of Georgia, was a notable man, and has filled no inconsiderable space in the history of the times. He was born in Wilkes County, Ga., in 1812, graduated at the university of that State in 1832, taught school, read law, engaged in the practice, and entered politics. After several terms in the Georgia Legislature, he was elected to Congress in 1838, and re-elected continnously for sixteen years, when he declined further service. He ran as Presidential Elector for the State at Large in Georgia, on the Douglass, and Johnson ticket in 1860; was elected to the Secession Convention in Georgia in 1861; opposed and voted against the Ordinance of Secession in that body-but gave it his support after it had been passed, against his judgment as to its policy; was elected by that convention to the Confederate Congress, which met at Montgomery, Ala., February 4, 1861, and was chosen Vice President under the Provisional Government by that Congress; was elected Vice President of the Confederate States for the term of six years, under what was termed the permanent Government, in November 1861; visited the State of Virginia on a mission under the Confederate Government in April, 1861, upon the invitation of that State; was one of the Commission ers on the part of the Confederate Government at the Hampton; Roads conference in February, 1865; was elected to the Senate of the United States in 1866 by the first Legislature convened under the new Constitution, made under the Johnson policy, but was not allowed to take his seat; was elected to the Forty-third Congress in 1873; was elected to the Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Congresses Last fall he was elected Governor of Georgia, as a regular Democrat, by a majority of 62,-357 over his Independent Democratic opponent. Mr. Stephens was a man of feeble constitution, and for most of his life vas a constant sufferer. In spite of his poor health, his clear and vigorous intellect enabled him to keep at the front in public affairs. He was a highly intellectual man, a severe student, close thinker and a fine constitutional lawyer. Mr. Stephens' influence in public affairs was always beneficial and elevating. He was a real statesman, and, excepting his connection with the Confederacy, a genuine patriot.

A NEW RLDORADO.

There is much excitment in Fulton and Hamilton counties, New York, over the discovery of gold, and considerable numbers are flocking to that section. The Benson Mining company has made the first "clean up" ever made by a goldmining company in this state. The amalgam from this "clean up" gives about $750 of gold. A sample of ten pennyweights and nineteen grains of this amalgam yielded $4.61 in pure gold. The metal is of a bright yellow, and more resembles Australian than California gold. The gravel from which this result was obtained was taken from the surface and down to a depth of fifteen feet, and the average yield is about $3.75 per ton. The passed ty the House and became a law by the present cost of mining and milling this gravel is 87 cents per ton, and the mill can work fifty tons every twenty-four

The best yard wood cen be purchased at the mines at $1.63 per cord, and this is used for uel at light expense.

> Family Man's Acceptance of a Chaffenge

Two friends happening to quarrel at a lavern, one of them, a man of hasty disposition, insisted on the other's fighting him next morning. The challenge was accepted on condition that they should breakfast together previous to their going to the field at the house of the person challenged. When the challenger arrived next morning according to appointment, he found every preparation made for breakfast, and his friend, his wife, and children all ready to receive him. Their repast being over and the family withdrawn, without the slightest hint of their fatal purpose having trans pired, the challenger asked the other if he was ready to attend. "No, sir," replied he, "not until we are upon a par; that amiable woman, and those six innocent children, who just now breakfasted with us, depend solely upon my life for their subsistence; and until you can stake something equal, in my estimation, to the welfare of seven persons, dearer to me than my right hand or my right eye, I can not think that we are equally matched." "We are not, indeed!" replied the other, giving him his hand; and they became firmer friends than before.

For the preceding year, including $11,441,300 for the rivers and harbors An analysis of the figures for the past three years shows that the appropriations for the current expenses of the government, irrespective of the amounts for pensions, aggregate less than either of the two preceding years. The regular penrion bills for the fiscal years 1882, 1883 and 1884 aggregate $252,575,000, the bill just passed being $20,275,000 in excess of the bill passed two years ago, and $13,-125,000 less than the bill of last year. Of the deficiency bill just passed only about $500,000 is on account of the current flood year. The appropriation bills of the present session were based upon estimates aggregating $271,394,814; as reportod from the House committee on appropriations they aggregated $220,082,752; as passed by the House, 226,420,208; as reported by the Senate committee on appropriations $230,662,541; and as finally by conference committee $229,327,511, his compliments. A Typical Arkansas Character.

A correspondent of the Louisville Conrier-Journal says: Colonel Archibald Yell, of Arkansas, I knew from my boyhood. He was born in Bedford county, Tennessee: received an academic education; studied law, and practiced at Shelbyville, tae county-seat. He was a gentheman of popular magners and took to the people as a young duck takes to a postd. In 1825 he was elected a Representative to the Legislature by an overwhelming majority, He was an enthusiastic admirer of General Jackson, who was then a candidate for President. In 1829 a tornado swept over Shelbyville demolishing a number of houses, and killing a number of persons. Sometime thereafter I heard Colonel Yell remark in a jocular vein, that the reason his law office received no injury was that it contained a file of General Duff Green's United States Telegraph. This journal was then an ardent supporter of General Jackson. Early in the first Presidential term of the old hero he appointed Colonel Yell United States Judge for the district of Arkansas. In 1835 he resigned this office and became a candidate for Congress. He had a competitor at the begining of the canvass, but soon scared him off the track. Here hange a tale, and I must tell it. The two were to dine together on a certain day, and came across some men who were shooting for beef. Colonel Yell asked them if they would allow him to take part in what he called their "game." On receiving their assent he alighted, made several shots, and won several quarters of beet. He then inquired: "who are the poorest families in the neighborhood?" On being informed passed by both houses, after adjustment | he sent them all the beef he had won with

With some diffiof those who lost a leg at or above the oulty he succeeded in getting Colonel Thursday night, in the discussion of the knee, or an arm at or above the elbow, Yell out from amongst the brethern, took and of those who have been so disabled him to one side, and said: "I'm off." "Of where," asked Colonel Yell. "Off the track," responded he. "I see it is perfeetly useless to run against a man, who, on the same day, can shoot for beef with the ungodly and sing pious songs over the mourners at a camp meeting." Col. lost one hand or one foot, or been totally Yell was elected, and re-elected in 1837, serving until the 4th of March, 1839. In 1840 he was elected Governor of the State on and after July 1, 1883, exception is incapacity to perform manual labor for four years. In 1845 he was again reequivalent to loss of hand or foot, and turned to congress, but resigned in 1846 to serve in the Mexican war. He was mustered into service as Colonel of the First Arkansas Volunteer Calvary, and was killed on a gallant charge upon the enemy at the battle of Buena Vista, February 23, 1847.

Curious Facts About Pecious Stones.

that the usual process for cutting and polishing made no impression upon it.

The black diamond is mostly used for tools. In Russia it is broken into flakes, polished and worn as court mourning. The historic diamonds have no more luster than a piece of glass. The sham diamond is more beautiful than a genuine stone, but it has a tendency to decomposition, and does not retain luster. The dia 1727. It is estimated that since that time they have produced at least two tons of diamonds. In England a stone weighing from 1733 to 1883. The first governor after one carat, and of the purest water, is Oglethorpe was Stephens. worth, when cut and polished, about $60 The dealers in rough stones acquire the habit of distinguishing the water of a rough stone by simply breathing upon it. Among the historic diamonds fhe Rajah weighed 367 carats and the Great Mogul 289. Before it was cut the latter weighed 900 carats. From the composition of the diamond we see what costly things nature makes from common material. All the diamond fields of the world are not worth the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania. A ruby of five carats is double the value of a diamond of that size, and one of ten carats is worth three times as much as a diamond of corresponding size. A perfect ruby is the rarest of all stones. Rubies are often imitated with real stones, the most common being spinel. But it is not difficult to distinguish the imitation, as the ruby is the only stone having a pigeon blood color. Another precious stone is the supphire, which is like the ruby, with the exception of the color. There has been seen a small stone which was ruby on one side and sapphire on the other. The Emerald is a deep green, the deeper the better. It loses no brilliancy in an artificial light, but its color may be expelled by a gentle heat. Most of our emeralds come from New Granada, and will always have flaws. In imitations it is not the hardness nor the color that is sought so much as the flaw The first eyeglasses were made in England of emeralds.

A Story of Thackeray

Lendon Letter. I heard a curious story of Thackersy last night, and believe it to be unprinted. Thackeray was one day sauntering away from the Garrick Club, then close to Covent Garden, and, strolling through Cranbourne Alley, stopped opposite a pie shop around which several urchins of both sexes were congregated, looking with wolfish eyes upon some pork pies which the baker had just placed in the window for sale. Thackeray had a great kindness for children and dumb animals; in fact for any creature that could not hit back if injured, so his soul was cached by the hungry-looking children. Calling the tallest, a slip of a girl some eleven or twelve year old, he gave her half a crown, telling her to buy are sixpenny pies, take one for herself, and give the others to her little companions. Presently he saw the girl with five pork pies, one in her hand and the others in her apron, making off at her best pace. Overtaking her he reproached her for taking all and not giving her friends any, whereupon the girl screamed out: "Let me alone, you nasty, dirty old beast, or I'll eall a policeman?" The novelist, it is needless to say, dropped this Flower of St. Giles like, as he said, "a hot potato," and never dabbled in practical philanthropy again. He took a cynical pleasure in relating the story as an instance of early depravity. All who know anything of juvenile vice in London will understand that there is nothing wonderful in the incident, except that the girl spent all the money in pies instead of proketing, if she had a pocket, the silver,

A Great Lifter.

The strongest man at Granite Corner, N. Y., is Stearns Carpenter, who is now eighty years old. Five years ago he grosped a twenty-four foot iron rail with each hand and walked off with them. At an earher period he shouldered a cannon that weighed 1,400 pounds, and the next day lifted a box of iron that weighed 1,900. He used to go around when the neighbors were killing hogs and when a particularly big one was saughtered he had a habit of twisting his fingers into its bristles, lifting the animal off the ground and guessing at its weight.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

The Morton Monument. INDIANAPOLIS, 1ND. Feb., 17, '83. Jesse W. Weik, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of 14th inst. just received. I do not know what more earnestness we could show than we have already done. I have been working constantly nearly a year. We have made the two largest payments that are to be made, and have only about $6,000 to be made, and have only about $6,000 more to raise. The statue is now being made and much of the work being done. The monument will be finished in May next. Many counties have paid in full, notably, Owen, $400; Vigo, $1,000; Vanderburgh, $750; Floyd, $375; Delaware. $600; Wayne, $600; St. Joseph, $500; Marion over $2,500, etc., etc. It does seem to me that this shows some earnestness. The contract for ne earnestness. The contract for ago, and more than half the contract price has been paid. The balance will be to pay in May by those who made the contract, whether we get any out-

Yours very truly,

CYRUS T. NIXON, Financial Agt.

The above explains itself. Putnam county yet owes about $120 to the monument fund, but it has been agreed that $100 shall cancel it. How shall it be raised? It ought to be done at once. Some of our townships have contributed nothing. A large number of persons who will read this paragraph have not contributed one cent. We suggest that each such person call at the store of Louis Weik, without delay, and pay that gentleman $1, or more, to be applied to this purpose. He has kindly consented to act as treasurer, and will account for all moneys placed in his hands. Now met anywhere. The message of President Arthur at the beginning of the late session rec-ommended Congress to do ten things. The record shows that six of the suggestions, and these the most important, were enacted into laws. The two omitted of most importance were the stoppage of the coinage of silver dol-lars and the passage of of a national bankrupt law. This statement would seem to indicate that the President had considerable influence with Congress, that his recommendations were wise and popular, and there is a high degree of harmony between the administration and the Republican party.

FROM OVER THE SEA.

It is a strange story. I shall never tell it while I live—this story of mine; but perhaps, after I am gone, some who live after me will like to read it. They might have thought me mad, or believed me given to falsehood; but when they see this paper, yellow with time, and signed by one who no longer dwells on earth. they will take the tale as I mean it.

I was named Marjorie Franklin, and was born at Newport over eighty years ago. There I lived till I was seventeen. I had every advantage that a young lady of that age could have, and I was always taught to remember that I should some day take my place at the head of an elegant establishment that one day I should be no longer plain "miss", but "my lady," for I was betrothed to my English cousin, whom I had never seen, and who, as the eldest son of a dead peer had inherited his title as well as his estate upon coming of age.

I had heard that my cousin was handsome and talented, and I had no fear that I should not be happy, although I had never seen him; and as the time approached on which his visit was to be expacted, for he was coming soon, and to stay until we were married in this land of mine, I felt much the sort of lighthearted expectation with which I looked forward to my first party.

The day of my cousin's visit drew near apace. We knew that he was to sail in the next vessel that left for New York. At that time there were no steamships, and the date of the arrival of a vessel was problematical.

However, he would come-I never doubted that. My wardrobe was replemished: I had robes of all the high, bright colors that became my brunette beauty; I had laces and buckles, gloves, fans and combs, chains and ribbons, kerchiefs and scarfs; and when I had tried all these things on, and surveyed myself often in the glass, with my hair dressed in twenty different styles, I longed for my future husband's coming chiefly that I might wear all this finery. Every day I examined the letter-bag for the letter which should tell of the Osprey's arrival, and that of my titled cousin with her. But the vessel was delayed; the winds had aware that they had borne me into the been unfavorable; and though she was house and restored me to myself, and I over-due nothing was yet heard of h

We sat together, my mother, my father and I, in the garden one evening. The air was clear, the twilight still lingering, though the moon had risen. We spoke of the Osprey.

"Many a gallant vessel has been wreckel" said my father, "Seldom have summer storms been so cruel. I shall be glad to have news that the ship that comes to us is safe."

"God grant it," answered my mother. "And bring my consin Alfred sate to and," said I. "I am tired of waiting for him."

"The Osprey is safe, said a voice at my elbow. "She is in port."

I turned with a start. We all rose to our feet. A strange young gentleman stood before us. He was as beautiful as the Apollo Belvidere, and as pale as the marble from which that statue is carved. He smiled. It was a sad smile. He bowed tow, and seemed to wait for some one else to speak.

"Let me call myself what you called sue a moment ago," interrupted the gentieman, turning toward me. "Let me say I am consin Alfred."

Afterward we all remembered a strange thing. Our warm and courteous greetings were all in words. There was no hand shaking, no touch of any kind. He was the son of my mother's sister; but she did not kiss him, nor did he kiss her.

"But how did you come? Where is your baggage?" asked my father in a litde while. "I never heard wheels nor the eramp of horse. My dear nephew, how did you manage to come on us so suddenly?"

My consin laughed. It was not a gay iaugh.

"That is my little secret. I will puzzle you with it for a while," he said. "At present confess that you do not know whether I dropped from the sky or came floating through the air. I felt too anxious to see my cousin, my betrothed wife, to wait to be brought in the regular fashion."

He had made a little pause before he said "to be brought." He made another after it, and I saw him shudder.

"Are you cold, cousin?" I asked.

"All but my heart," he answered. "And you must be meary," said my mother, "and hungry, too. I will have supper prepared at once. Meanwhile come in doors. My dear, we may like to sit outside here, but perhaps our guest may not.

"Certainly, certainly," responded my father.

He stepped forward as he spoke, and pushed open the long windows that open. ed from the drawing room to the veranda. "Come in," he said. "Come indoors nephew."

At that moment my mother called him She needed the keys of the wine cellar, and his aid in the choice of the wines, and he left us.

"Come in, cousin Alfred," said I. "Cousin Marjorie," he answered, "do not ask me indoors. The evening is too beautiful. Will you not walk with me this once under the moon? You are not afraid of me, are you Marjorie. I laughed a little.

"Why should I fear you?" I asked. You are no stranger. I have always heard of you. I will wask with you gladly.

I walked beside him. I looked down. He looked at me. We passed from the garden and turned toward the beach, and came at last to the ruins of the old building over which there had been so much talk lately. Then we called it the old

"They say it is centuries old," said I. "And so many lives have run their course and ended in the tomb, while these stones still remain," he said sadly. "Man dies, and these insensate things outlast him. Yet, while he lives, what a glorious thing to be a man?" He paused. His eyes glittered in his beautiful white face.

"Think of it, beautiful Marjorie," he said. "Think of me, your cousin Alfred -young, strong as a giant, rich, powerful, and with you for his bride. You, you bright young thing, think of a man like that with all before him, and suddenly all is gone, and death leads him he knows not whither."

His glance, his voice, his words frightened me.

"Cousin Albert, are you ill," I asked. Perhaps we had better go home."

"You shall go home," answered my consin. "You sweet, young, living thing, I see fear in your eye. You tremble. Give me one moment more. It is so sweet here on earth under the moon with you and love. And you have all life before you; give me one moment more."

"My beautiful cousin is certainly deranged," I said to myself.

"I have not yet saluted you, Marjorie," he said. "May I not kiss your hand, I your betrothed husband?"

Oh, his sad voice! I let him take my fingers in his own, and he bent and press ed his lips to them.

As he did so I felt no touch of haman flesh and blood, but through all my frame thrilled strange electric flashes, I could not speak or stir, but as I stood, turned, as it seemed, to stone, I saw the beautiful form before me fade away. It did not move from the spot where it stood, but even as I regarded it I saw it change into a white vapor and slowly melt into the

Out in the darkness, beyond the windows, the servants went to and fro with lanterns, searching vainly for the man who had come and gone so strangelyfor none believed my story.

But now there was heard the datter of a norse's hoofs, a man alighted at the gate, asked for my father, and was shown into our presence.

A seafaring man, tall and bronzed, wearing a look that spoke of no good tidings. He took a seat offered him, and addressed my father.

"Sir, I am the second mate of the Osprey, and I come to you with evil tidings. I regret to bring them, but I have no choice."

"Proceed, sir," said my father. "The Osprey has met with some disaster?"

"No, sir," replied the sailor. "The O. prey is in port, unharmed by all the evil weather she has encountered on her voyage; but when she sailed she had on board a passenger, a young nobleman who was crossing the ocean, it is said, to visit his affianced bride. The name recorded on our books is -Alfred, Lord Hardinge."

My father bowed his head. "My wife's nephew," he said, "and be my father in a faint voice. "A month ago," replied the second mate of the Osprey.

Then he drew from his bosom a minetur seet in diamonds.

"This," he said, "had been placed in Captain's care. It was to be presented to his bride, Lord Alfred's own portrait.

I sprang from the couch and caught it from him, and I saw the face that had faded into the air in the moonlight beside the old mill. And I knew it was the spirit of my consin that had come to me. THE STATION AGENT. His Ways and Manner Peculiarities of the Man at the metion.

agents that can be four are nearly always located at the junctons, where there is nothing but a depot ad a store and a saloon, but such is the use. A traveler gets to a junction and gos into the depot to find when the next tran goes and the ticket-window is closed. He looks around and finds that the agent's helping to unload freight, or is upon side-track coupling ears, or is over acros the track helping a farmer kill hogs, o has gone to the adjoining town with a cam to carry some passengers. Or, if the agent is in the office, he has got more business than the general manager of the road. You speak to him, and ask a question, and his brow corru gates, andhe goes or counting a pile of one-doller bills, and sets as though he thought he had a dim idea that he had been spoken to, but he waits until he gets the money in the safe, and turns the knob, and then he answer you so short that you almost conclude b walk to the next atation, and then he matles out of office and locks the door, ad you think he has gone to attend to t me important the bottle of pickled oysters that had be business upon which depe ds the fate of the road, and you go out and walk on the platform, and pretty soon you see him helping his wife to ring ant clothes, or you see him out in the back yard hanging clothes on the line, or splitting railroad ties for wood. You may be a millionaire, and you may pay your hostler more than the junction agent as a salary, but he looks upon you as a three-card | before daylight, the way he used to on monte man, and locks the stove door for fear you will put in a stick of wood or steal the lining out of the stove. The agent is in his element when a train is a few hours behind, and he site at the telegraph instrument working as if the work rested on his shoulders. You listen to the constant click of the instrument, and you would give a $10 note to know what is going on over the wire. Occassionally he will laugh at something the instrument says, and when you think the news of the world is coming over the wires and is stored in that massive brain, the agent turns to a country galoot, who has on a blue drilling roundabout, and his pants in his boots, and who wipes his nose on his mitten and says: "There is going to be a dance at the hop-yard at Johnston Siding to-night, and they want us to come up on No. 4." Then you realize that the agent all these long hours that you have been watching the varied expressions of his calm mysterious face has been chaffing with the female operater at the next station, and as the country galoot takes a chew of plug tobacco and says he will go and brush up a little and put on a clean shirt before No. 4 comes, and the operator says they will have a daisy time at the dance, you go out on the platform and try to get acquainted with the fellow who runs the horse-power wood-sawing machine. There is no man who knows more than the junction agent about every thing if you can draw him on'. Though only four trains a day stop at his station, and they only stop for a minute to let off some poor devil who has got to get off there, the agent is in his element for a brief moment. He addresses the conductor as "Jim," or "George," or "Billy," and asks, with a show of interest as deep as a division superintendent would have, where he passed "No 1," and if "No. 6" is going to be on time. He may ask something about the railroad stocks, and you imagine that he is bulling the market when the chances are that he hasn't got $11 left from his last month's salary. If he was polite, and did not seem to own the road, you would like him, but when he snubs you, and treats you as though information was worth more than your ticket, you hate him, and if you should hear there was talk of promoting him to a station where there were six houses, you would want to prevent it.

crossest man on the line is given an isolated junction. An Englishman's View.

There may be some rule by which the Albert Pell, M. P., who in 1879 was a member of the Royal Commission that reported a remarkably able paper to the English Parliament on the subject of the shipment of American eattle to England, arrived in this country on a visit on private business January 1. He sailed this week for home on the steamship Pirthia, of the Cunard Line. To a New York Tribune reporter, who saw him at the Westminster Hotel while he was packing his trunk, he said:

"My visit has been one purely of a private business respecting cattle. I have traveled West eleven hundred and odd miles, having been in Southeastern Colorado, on the borders of Mexico, and among the foot-hills of the Rocky Mountains. I went as far as Trinidad and Pueblo, and had lovely weather, with little snow, but plenty of dust. The view which I took in my report to the Government in 1879 was that England had nothing to fear from the importation of American cattle, my belief being at that time that the increase in the population of the United States would soon put such a price upon meat that it would make it difficult to export it to England with profit. Three years experience has verified that opinion I find the prices at retail of good most in New York, and of eggs and cheese, to differ very little from those charged in England. The trade in refrigerated beef has abated also, for its exportation is extremely hazardous. In my trip this time I did not see so many old cattle about as before, and I think we have eaten up a good bit of your store. It has been said by an observing man, and I think that I can endorse it, that England never begins upon the meat supply of any country Men who travel a gre deal never cease that she does not eat it short. The cattle to wonder how it is that he crossest depot I saw this time were younger than before and you won't be able to supply us so fast as heretofore with old beeves. You will have to come to what we are doing in England-and what you are already doing, for that matter, in Kentucky and Missouri-developing your cattle with a view to producing as large an animal as possible at two years of age. I was much struck with some cattle I saw in Missonri: they were very fine, I thought."

"What was it about your tolks getting up in the night to eat? The hired girl was over here after some soap the other morning, and she said she was going to leave your house." "Well, that was a picnic. Pa said he wanted breakfast earlier than he was in the habit of having it and he said I might see to it that the house was awake early enough. The other night I awoke with the awfulest pain you ever heard of. It was that night you give me and my chum gun to work. Well, I couldn't sleep, and I thought I would call the hired girls. and they got up and got breakfast to going, and then I rapped on pa and ma's door and told them the breakfast was getting cold, and they got up and came down. We eat breakfast by gaslight, and pa yawned and said it made a man feel good to get up and get ready for work the farm, and ma she yawned and agreed with pa, cause she has to or have a row. After breakfast we sat around for an hour, and pa said it was a long time getting daylight, and bimeby pa looked at his watch. When he began to pull out his watch I lit out and hid in the storeroom, and pretty soon I heard pa and ma come up stairs and go to bed, and then the hired girls they went to bed, and when it was all still and the pain had stopped inside my clothef, I went to bed, and I looked to see what time it was, and it was two o'clock in the morning. We got dinner at eight o'clock in the morning, and pa said he guessed he would call up the house after this, so I have lost another job, and it was all on account of that bottle af pickled oysters you gave me. My chum says he had colic, too, but he didn't call up his folks. It was all he could do to get up himself. Why don't you sometimes give away something that is not spiled?" The grocery man said he guessed he knew what to give away, and the boy went out and hung up a sign in front of the grocery that he had made on wrapping paper with red chalk, which read: "Rotten eggs, good enough for custard pies, for eighteen cents a dozen.

Communication in N. Y. Paper. "The first introduction into public life of James Carey, town councillor of Dublin who on Saturday named the Phoenix Park murderers, is both characteristic and interseting. Oary is a bricklayer, and was foreman for Mead & Co., the largest builders in Ireland. A few years ago the corporation of firm for a new system of sewers, which was awarded only after a sharp competition. The sum stipulated was so ridiculously low that it drew the attention of workingmen every where in the United Kingdom. The press stigmatized the job as a swindling operation, and made fun of the English sand, English brick, English cement and English water, which were being earried from England in special tanks made for the occasion, the contractors claiming that it was better than Irish water. There was a prospect of trouble ahead until Carey had printed in the Dublin papers a long expose of the way the Englishmen did their work. He said that it would all cave in inside of a year. The English contractors did not wait to prove him a liar, but departed at once. The corporation continued the work, and used only Irsh material in its completion. Carey was for a long time the biggest man in Ireland. His name was in ev ery ones month, and he was chosen to represent Trinity Ward, the Murray Hill of Dublin and the hot-bed of Toryism, in the Town Conneil.

Infant Suicide in France.

Miss Ada Leigh, of whose remarkable work in Paris we gave some account in our issue of December 23 last, writes to esterday's Times to record the terrible fact that inlant suicide in France has actually destroyed twice as many lives in four years as her orphanages contrived to save in eight years that is, that the energy thrown into infant suicide has been more than four times as productive of result as that of the charity which she dispenses. One hundred and ninety eight boys and forty girls under the age of fifteen, she tells us, destroyed themselves in four years, and of these two hundred were over twelve years of age, twenty-one between twelve and ten, four over ten years, six below it, and one only seven. Surely in no other country except France does not merely despair, but that impatient intolerance of misery which cuts its way out of life rather than await the end. invade the mind of such babies as these. Neal Dow's Rat Story. Communication to the Boston Congregationalist.

My house is supposed to be a rat-roof. and was so when quite new, but at one is supposed that he took them to read to time, more than twenty years ago, we had a large colony of the rodens, greatly to our annoyance, and it was with us a matter of daily wonder where they found a weak spot in our decenses against there. One evening a young lady from a friend's family, living in a large, fine house nearly a mile away, was with us, and the talk turned on rats as we heard ours galloping in the ceilings and scampering up and down the walls. The young lady said that none had ever been in their house and she did not think there was any point at which they could enter. My eldest daughter, a great wit, said: "I've heard that if politely invited to do so in writing, rats will leave any house and go to any other house to which they may be directed, and I will tell ours that at your house they will find spacious quarters and an excellent commisariat." At the moment, before us all, she wrote a most grandiloquent letter to the large family of rate that had so long favored us with their presence, pointing out to them that at No. 6 Pearl street was a large, fine house which had never been favored with the presence of any of their family, where they would find ample quarters and a fat and accepted recently on the Consolidatlarder. When finished she read the missive to the company, and we had a great laugh over it. As an old superstition she then put lard upon it, and carried it into writes in seven languages. A few days after the young lady was at where it hung in a house at Englesville, our house again, and burst into a laugh, exclaiming: "Our house has been overrun with rats!" That recalled to us the fact that we had heard none in our walls. My daughter went to the attic and the letter was gone While we were talking and laughing over the curious affair a friend came in, and hearing the talk said that two evenings before, in the bright moonlight, he saw several rate running

FIGHTING A BAD BILL.

THE DEMOCRATS TAKEN BY SURPRISE BY THE MINOR. ITY IN THE SENATE

AND THROWN INTO CONFUSION

BY AN UNEXPECTED MOVE AGAINST THE METROPOLITAN POLICE BILL.

Indianapolis Times, March 1st.

At ten minutes after 3 o'clock the metropolitan police bill was called up and read a third time, and it was Senator Fletcher, advocating the and outrageous.

Senator Yancey said that the bum. mers were clamorous for this bill-a community. The characteristics of the men who had lobbied for this bill ought to convince the Senate it should be defeated. He believed he knew the feelings of the people of the city as well as Senator Fletcher, and he knew that they did not want this infamous bill. Senator Rahm said the people at Evansville did want it and had so signified by attaching their names to petitions in its behalf. The men who had signed it were the richest men in the city, and represented both parties. The present police force was Democratic and they were not satisfied to have the present system maintained, and wanted to take politics out of the City Council.

Senator Benz—Don't you think it the selection as it would for the City Councilmen to do it?

Senator Rahm said he didn't care anything about the State Auditor and Treasurer, but wanted to get the struggle for positions on the police force out of city politics. He admitted that the system proposed by the bill would cost a little more money, but that was no matter if the city was benefitted by it.

Senator Graham yielded the floor to Senator Van Vorhis, who said that this bill was advocated by the very lowest class of citizens in Indianapolis, and he believed that if the people of Evansville knew what this bill is they would not favor it. The bill opened the doors of the City Treasury without any guards to men who ought not to be trusted with any responsibility, for if com mon rumor was correct, the chairman of the commission was to be Sun McCoy, while the second place laid between S. Leadused upon the subject. It is subject. It is safe, however, to say that the Lieut. Governor has no cause for alarm. He will not be impeached, as under the provisions of the Constitution the Democratic but used it simply to impart a pleasing variety to the bill. When the man read it he bill that he was talking to a whole concert company, but finally, convinced by her grave manner that she was very much in earnest, he promised he would have the programme struck off at concentration. the programme struck off at once. That afternoon, the child, with a cup of paste in one hand and a bunch of bills in the other, went round the streets pasting them up in the most conspicuous places. Then the school house having been secured was visited and swept, and the small prima donna returning to wash her face and eat her supper was ready for the concert, which proved a fine success and netted $8, most of which she
